

ALEXANDER DANILOFF LENORMAND
II Edition

APRIL 2021

WHO AND WHAT IS THE LENORMAND ORACLE?

Marie Anne Adelaide Lenormand was a famous fortune-teller in Napoleonic-era France. After her death in 1843, European games manufacturers capitalised on her fame by using her name to promote new card games such as this, the Lenormand Oracle.

The Lenormand Oracle is a set of 36 cards, each containing simple imagery, a playing card reference, the card's number, its title and sometimes a poem or aphorism.

Alexander Daniloff's Lenormand has 40 cards (the standard 36, plus another Lord and Lady card, a blank and the card with the Limited Edition details).

The playing card references appear as flags or court card image inserts. The card's number and name are also provided, in English.

The additional Lord and Lady cards allow the reader to make a wider and more inclusive range of relationship pairings.

New II Edition Information

In April 2021, Alexander revisited this, his first Lenormand, and made some changes. Firstly the size of this second edition deck is a slightly broader 'poker size' of 89mm x 64mm (3.5" x 2.5"). The Limited Edition signed card has also been updated too. The card stock remains the same quality game card stock with a smooth finish. The second edition deck has a beautiful new box and card back which easily distinguishes it from the original version.

Here is the new Anchor card on left, in comparison with the original Anchor card on right.

In addition, there are completely new images for all four Lord and Lady cards which allow the two Lord cards to be inclined towards each other and the two Lady cards too – if you wish to use the single-sex pairings in your readings.

All the other card images are slightly larger to accommodate the new card size, but they are otherwise unchanged apart from new locations for the card name and number – both pieces of information are now to be found at the foot of the card.

LENORMAND ORACLE CARD MEANINGS

Each card is listed in numerical order, followed by its playing card insert and then the Grand Tableau House name. A basic interpretative outline then follows to help you read the cards.

- | | | | |

HOW TO READ THE LENORMAND ORACLE - BASICS

This leaflet will merely provide you with the first steps on your Lenormand journey – there are many wonderful resources which are available in many languages that will help you develop your skills and provide nuanced and useful readings. Some Lenormand resources are suggested on p9.

Lenormand readings are usually Strings, Grids or a Grand Tableau. They mostly interpreted in pairs.

Significators

Significators are important beginning points in Lenormand readings. In the Daniloff Oracle, you are provided with two options for Cards for 28 and 29. If your sitter identifies as male, you can use the 28 Lord card. If your sitter identifies as female, the 28 Lady card may be chosen.

Your sitter's partner or significant other can be represented by any one of the other significators provided (M/F, M/M, F/F or F/M).

You can, of course, allow a significator to arise randomly from any part of the deck. You may also wish to choose an appropriate significator depending upon the topic of the reading. For example: a reading concerning money may lead you to select Fish as the significator. A reading about a friend may lead you to select Dog.

Card Order

The order of the two cards makes a difference to how you interpret them. For example:

Clover + Coffin Luck (Clover) runs out (Coffin).
Coffin + Clover An ending (Coffin) proves lucky (Clover).

Mirroring

You can read one card and pair it with any card which lies in a mirrored position. For example, in the 3-card string outlined below, Scythe mirrors Dog. This is very useful in spreads of five or more cards.

Corners

If you are performing a 3 x 3 card grid or a Grand Tableau, you can also read the corner cards of your spread as pairs. These can be interpreted as the 'boundaries' or 'limitations' of the spread.

Cross

In a grid spread or a Grand Tableau, the cards that lie either side of the central significator card and directly above and below, form a cross. These can be read together in pairs too. Since these cards are in direct contact with the significator, they are very close or very strongly felt.

Knighting

If you are familiar with the game of chess, you will know how the Knight chess piece moves – two to the side and one up or down, or one to the side and two up or down. These can be read in pairs.

As you can see, the possibilities for multiple pairing explains why Lenormand cards do not have positional values in a reading in the same way as Tarot cards do.

READING IN STRINGS

Unlike Tarot readings which can often be a single card, Lenormand readings are divined in 'strings' of two or more cards and read in pairs. Using a string of up to seven cards will provide a very detailed answer to a question.

Strings are read from left to right, with the first card regarded as the main topic under consideration and the other cards affecting it. Here is an example:

Dog + Anchor + Scythe

A friend's (Dog) security (Anchor) has come to an abrupt end (Scythe). The main topic is Dog. The other cards refer to Dog.

Lenormand cards can be taken very literally and Dog CAN mean a dog or Rider could refer to equestrian sports or someone one horseback!

READING A 3 x 3 BOX GRID (9-CARD SPREAD)

For readings of more than seven cards, use a grid format. The most common box format for Lenormand readings is the 3 x 3 grid for nine cards.

Here is an example of a 9-card grid:

Cross	Bouquet	Tower
Dog	Scythe	Key
Sun	Moon	Star

Scythe is the central card and is a randomly chosen significator – so the spread wants to talk about swift endings.

The first card laid is Cross, then Bouquet, Tower and Dog. The spread ends with Star.

Do not be daunted by the number of cards – start with Cross, Bouquet and Tower and interpret as a string of three cards, reading in pairs. Then move onto the middle line and then the bottom line. Then do the same with the cards that make up the three columns.

Here are some examples of the mirror, corner, cross and knighting cards mentioned earlier, as they arise in this 3 x 3 spread.

Mirrored cards – Dog mirrors Key, Cross mirrors Star, Tower also mirrors Star etc.

The corner cards are Cross and Tower, Sun and Star.

The cross cards are Bouquet and Key, Dog and Moon

The Knighting cards: Cross is knighted by Key and Moon. For Bouquet the knighting cards are Sun and Star etc.

The largest spread that you can perform with the Lenormand Oracle is The Grand Tableau.

READING THE GRAND TABLEAU - BASICS

In this spread, the cards are shuffled and laid out in four rows of eight cards (4 x 8), beginning with the top left card as the first card laid down. The last four cards in your hand are laid in a separate row, beneath the final row of eight cards. All 36 cards are now used.

This is a very in-depth reading, but all the techniques outlined above can be used in the Grand Tableau.

To begin, find your sitter's significator (Lord or Lady) and the card for their significant other. Also consider the card that best represents the sitter's topic for the spread (for a health issue, this could be Tree) or perhaps the card representing the Significant Other.

Work your way methodically (in pairs) through the cross cards, the corner cards, the knighting cards, mirroring cards, 3 x 3 grids etc. Make sense of the cards in the context of your sitter's question.

Near or Far

In the Grand Tableau especially, cards that are close to the Significator (ie touching) are regarded as near. Their effects will be strong on your sitter or happening soon. Cards that are far away from the significator are further away in time or weaker in their effects.

Houses

Although all our cards are placed randomly in the rows of the Tableau, we can regard each space that they occupy as a 'House'.

For example, the first card in our Grand Tableau may be Anchor, but the HOUSE belongs to 1 The Rider. Mice may be the second card in our Tableau, and it is in the HOUSE of 2 Clover ... the last card in the Tableau falls on the House of the Cross. Interpret the card in relation to the House, just as you would if they were before you as a pair of cards.

If you look at the list of keywords provided earlier in this leaflet, you will see suggestions for each House. You can then interpret important cards in the Tableau with regard to the House that they are on.

Pay attention to the cards which land on the tricky Houses (eg House of Scythe) and which Houses the tricky cards (eg Coffin) land on. Also, see where the lucky cards land and which cards are on the lucky Houses.

The final four cards which do not lie on the four main rows are not part of the Grand Tableau reading. BUT, you can, of course, read them as a small spread in itself. These cards are not active in the Tableau.

There is so much more to learn about reading the Grand Tableau, so please make use of the many wonderful online and published resources to continue your learning journey.
